Learning Arabic by candlelight

Image: Ahramonline

AMBergh's students of Arabic in Cairo and Alexandria have come to cope with Egypt's power problem. In August, Egypt witnessed an unprecedented wave of power outages in Cairo. At the Language Institutes, AMBergh's students are fortunately not affected as the power generators kick in when there is a power outage. According to Ahramonline, Egypt's Electricity Minister aims at a long-term solution through a new power station and renewable solar energy. Meanwhile, Egyptians are finding new ways to survive. Live like an Egyptian in Egypt: stock up with candles and, if need be, learn your Arabic vocab by candlelight. AMBergh News

Amman: one of the region's liveliest centres!

This once-sleepy town has become one of the most sophisticated cities in the Middle East. It's now one of the region's liveliest, and most underrated, centres. It's also one of the safest. Jabal Amman, once populated by Jordan's elite in the early 20th century, is now a hotspot for students and young professionals. Rainbow and Mango Streets are great strolling areas. Enjoy the villas, cafés and boutiques, and pop into Books@Café to mingle with hip young Ammanites.

Classical culture is available in Downtown Amman. Sitting on the steps of the Roman theatre provides a peaceful break. The ancient Citadel, towering above Downtown, is the original city, with its Temple of Hercules, Umayyad Palace, National Archaeological Museum and panoramic views. If staying until sunset, you will be rewarded with a symphony of sound from the city's mosques calling to maghreb (sunset) prayers. Truly one of the most magical experiences in the Middle East!
